National Navajo Code Talkers Day

National Navajo Code Talkers Day was recently observed on August 14th. Established by President Reagan in 1982, this day recognizes the service of the Navajo Code Talkers and their vital contributions during World War II. The first 29 Navajo Code Talkers of the 382nd Platoon, USMC have passed, but today we remember these Native Americans / First Nations and preserve the honor they brought to themselves, their people and their country.

The original Native American Code Talkers served the U.S. Army during World War I (WWI) and included Choctaw, Comanche, Hopi, and Cherokee veterans. In the early 1940s, WWI veteran Philip Johnston recalled the value of these code talkers and their languages and suggested the U.S. Marines use a similar communications strategy in WWII. After previewing the language, the Marines recruited the entire 382nd Platoon to develop and memorize the Navajo-coded language, which became one of many Type-One codes that translated English to construct a coded message.

Code Talkers famously played a huge role in the Battle of Iwo Jima, but no one would know of the sacrifice and service of these American military heroes until the Code Talkers program was declassified in 1968.

At the turn of the century, President Bill Clinton awarded Congressional Gold Medals to 29 Code Talkers, and a year after that in 2001, President George W. Bush presented more medals to honor these veterans.
